Perry County's Jody Maggard Elected to KASA Board of Directors

(Frankfort, Ky) Jody Maggard, chief financial officer for Perry County Schools, has joined the Kentucky Association of School Administrators Board of Directors as the Role Group Director representing District Operations.

KASA's Role Group Directors bring specialized professional perspectives to the board and help connect the association with administrators serving in similar positions across Kentucky. Representing District Operations, Maggard will provide insight into the financial, logistical and administrative systems that allow schools and districts to serve students effectively.

"Strong school systems depend on thoughtful, responsible and forward-looking operational leadership," said KASA Chief Executive Officer Dr. Rhonda Caldwell. "Jody understands the complex work required to align resources with a district's educational priorities. His experience will add a valuable voice to our board and help KASA better serve district operations leaders across Kentucky."

As chief financial officer, Maggard helps oversee the financial operations of Perry County Schools and supports the responsible use of district resources. His work helps provide the operational foundation educators need to remain focused on teaching, learning and student success.

Through his board service, Maggard will help communicate the priorities of district operations leaders, encourage collaboration among colleagues and inform KASA's advocacy and professional learning efforts.

“District operations may often take place behind the scenes, but they directly affect the opportunities and support available to every student and employee,” Maggard said. “I am grateful for the opportunity to represent the professionals who keep Kentucky’s school systems running and to help ensure their experience and expertise inform KASA’s statewide work.”
